

INDUSTRIAL MAKEOVER

Cutler & Co.'s dining room, housed in an old metalwork factory in Fitzroy, Melbourne's industrial area and first suburb, is the epitome of industrial chic. The contemporary redesign by architect Pascale Gomes-McNabb combines off-beat elements such as mixed scattered lighting with pared-back original features like the rustic and raw brick wall. A mix of classic chairs and extensive use of timber add a modern edge. cutlerandco.com.au

Bisazza mosaics are the haute couture of tile design, so if you can't afford to tile the whole bathroom create a feature wall behind the vanity mirror.

BOLD STATEMENT

The bathroom is often an afterthought in restaurant design, however Cutler & Co. have gone all out in creating a striking look in their bathroom that would just as easily be at home in a modern house or high-end apartment. Timeless black and white is teamed with bold mosaic red tiles and dim (flattering!) lighting to set the mood. Mirrors in an abstract geometric design create added interest, reflecting features like the forest effect of the laminate door. A similar look can also be achieved by using wallpaper on bathroom walls above the tile line. cutlerandco.com.au

NATURAL NORDIC

The interior design of Queensland's first three-hat restaurant, Esquire in Brisbane, is a fusion of natural elegance and uncluttered function. Nature-inspired elements dominate the space from the Nordic design of the timber furniture to the polished stone look of the flooring, set against a neutral palette of beige and black. It's modern and sleek and accessorised with simple yet striking feature lighting and quality glassware. esquire.net.au

As one of the most used pieces of furniture, it's worth investing in well-designed, solid furniture that creates a timeless look.

INFORMAL OPULENCE

Awarded three chef hats every year for the past nine years, there's no doubt est. in Sydney's CBD is top of its game for food and wine. The interior design also receives top marks for how it blends original features, such as the columns and decorative ceiling, into a contemporary space. An overall feeling of informal opulence is achieved thanks to the comfortable upholstered seating, stylish sideboards, chandeliers and lamps. The look is uncluttered and in true fine-dining style, finished with crisp white tablecloths. merivale.com.
